Citizens' group voices approval for multi-level parking garage

By Steven Penn

Frances Batt, president of Citizens' Action Association (CAA), a neighborhood group opposed to westward expansion of UNO, told members of the Student Senate Thursday night that construction of a multi-level parking garage south of Arts and Sciences Hall would cost about $1.5 million.

Batt said the figure includes cost of labor and materials, and averages out to be approximately $2000 for each of the 500 spaces.

Batt, who said CAA represents 700 residents living west of UNO, said a garage is the best solution to the parking problem on campus.

"It's not necessary to go west," she said, adding that "education is the business of UNO, not parking."

UNO has been restrained from any further expansion of Lot W on the west side of campus, at least until Oct.

20, when a hearing is scheduled to be held in Douglas County District Court.

Sen. Lee Estrada doubted that the garage could be built for the figure Batt gave, but said cooperation between CAA and the senate is needed to help solve the problem.

Speaker of Student Senate announces his resignation

Mark Norris, speaker of the Student Senate, announced his resignation at Thursday night's meeting.

Norris said he resigned to "further my goals in Student Government." He said he is "very seriously considering running for student president/regent."

Mark Smith will serve as interim speaker until the position is filled in elections at the next senate meeting.

drew an angry response from Sen. Ruth Rada.

"People in your neighborhood can walk here, they don't need to park here," said Rada. "The rest of the city needs access to the university. We have a parking problem here. We need the support you get from your group to get some damn parking garages," she said.

Said Sen. James McMahon: "This issue is getting worse and worse. We must wake up and address this issue. Multi-level garages are the only way to go." He added that proposals for parking garages in the past have not been acted upon.

Batt said the Board of Regents has been uncooperative on the parking issue, and also placed some of the blame on the city of Omaha. In regard to the latter, she said city building codes requiring certain numbers of parking slots per building city-wide has not been followed.

AAUP package OK'd; parts called 'inaccurate'

By Bob Wilson

The NU Board of Regents Friday called parts of the AAUP settlement package "blatantly misleading and inaccurate," and unanimously voted to accept the union's package "subject to specific clarifications and understandings."

Although the package was essentially approved by the Board and is expected to take effect on Oct. 12 as scheduled, the regents said that AAUP literature describing parts of the package was not correct.

Those parts concerned two letters written by UNO Chancellor Del Weber to the AAUP.

The regents said they would not accept the letters as part of the settlement package. Both letters were included in the package accepted by the AAUP on Sept. 8.

According to Suzanne Moshier, president of AAUP, Weber's first letter states that the University of Nebraska agrees to increase UNO's research and research travel funds to $91,937 for 1981-82, and to increase those funds to $166,937 by the year 1983-84.

However, flyers describing the terms of the proposed settlement, which were distributed to AAUP members who met to vote on the package, said that the letter also included the statement that UNO eventually would achieve parity with UNL in the amount of its research and research travel funds. The flyer was distributed to AAUP members who met to vote on the package.

According to Moshier, Weber's second letter states that the university agrees to establish a committee composed of faculty members and administrators to make specific recommendations regarding bargaining policies to be used during future AAUP — NU negotiations.

The committee is supposed to make its recommendations by April 1, 1982, said Moshier, and would only offer suggestions concerning collective bargaining governance proposals.

The second letter was described correctly in the AAUP flyer.

In their resolution accepting the AAUP package, the regents pointed out that, contrary to the AAUP literature, the first of Weber's letters did not contain any reference to UNO's achieving parity with UNL in research and research travel funds, and that no approval was being given for such a proposal.

The regents also said that Weber's first letter to the AAUP "shall not be construed as an indication that budget items are the subject of collective bargaining..." and "There is absolutely no understanding concerning the relative levels of research or travel funding at UNO and UNL..."

Additionally, the regents also said that the Policy Review Committee, the subject of Weber's second letter, and any recommendations made by that committee, will not necessarily be accepted by or even considered in any negotiating efforts between the union and the university.

The regents said the letter "does not and will not bring the matter of University governance or policy considerations into the collective bargaining process. The Board of Regents will not and cannot compromise its constitutional and statutory authority and responsibility for governance and policy consideration to any collective bargaining process..."

Finally, the regents' resolution stated that the two letters written by Weber "and the contents thereof are not a part of the collective bargaining settlement, and do not result from the collective bargaining procedure."

Moshier said she did not want to comment on whether the regents' rejection of the two letters as part of the package would delay or block its implementation.

Neither AAUP attorney David Cullan nor NU General Counsel Richard Wood could be reached for comment on the regents' resolution and its possible implications.

Regents uphold decision to end compensation

By Bob Wilson

University of Nebraska student body presidents still will not be granted compensation for the work they do while in office.

The Board of Regents refused to approve a motion made by UNO Student President/Regent Florene Langford which would have rescinded their February decision to end such compensation.

The decision will affect all student body presidents beginning Oct. 1.

As it now stands, the Nebraska Constitution prohibits compensation to members of the Board of Regents.

The regents contend that as members of the Board, student body presidents should not be compensated.

Langford contends that those officers should be compensated for their duties as student body presidents, but not for their duties as regents.

"I have researched Article 7, Section 10 of the Constitution," said Langford. "The Legislature did not intend non-compensation (to student body presidents) for non-regental duties."

Richard Mockler, student president/regent of UNL, told the Board there should be a distinction made between student representative roles of student presidents and student regents.

Regent Kermit Hansen of Omaha disagreed. Hansen said the position is a "dual office" which is intended to be filled by one person.

Regent John Payne of Kearney said the positions of student president/regent are "non-voting and shall be (filled by) the student president of the student bodies."

Langford argued that the other regents received compensation for duties performed outside their roles as Board members, and the same should hold true for student regents in their duties as student body presidents.

Regent Robert Koefoot of Grand Island supported the student regents' contentions.

Koefoot said, "It should be up to the students to abolish student president fees — it's not our place to abolish them. Their pay comes from student fees, not us."

Regent Edward Schwartzkopf of Lincoln said he thought the positions should be given to two people instead of one.

Regent Robert Simmons of Scottsbluff said he thought there was no answer to the dilemma because "it's a chicken and egg question."

Other actions taken by the regents included:

— The appointment of Herb Price as the director of University Relations at UNO.

— The approval of the establishment of a Fitness Center within the School of Health, Physical Education and Recreation. This combines a number of existing complementary activities at HPER into a single administrative unit within the school. The center will offer education, research and service in various areas pertaining to physical fitness.

— The approval of a Public Radio Program Agreement affiliating UNO's KVNO-FM radio with National Public Radio, Inc. This allows KVNO to broadcast news and information programs, arts and performances, classical, jazz, folk and contemporary music, and dramatic programming made available by National Public Radio.

Party scene is good for some; others avoid crowded rooms

What's in a party? Why do people go? For the women, for the men, for the drinks or smoke, to forget about the exam, past or up coming, to meet someone with whom they can form a lasting relationship?

With so many different reasons to go to a party, it is no wonder there is no shortage of patrons on Friday and Saturday nights.

There is also a host of different types of parties, depending on who's giving the party. For one thing, some people tend to invite the same kind of people to their parties.

So there is the loud party, the quiet party, the drug party, the redneck party, the wild women and crazy guys party and, of course, there is the totally boring party and the out-of-control party that always winds up getting a visit from the police.

The number of parties on campuses around the country has surely grown through the 70s (the 60s students had better things to do.)

But there are still those who say they would rather not fool with going to a party. They've been once, they say. Too much smoke. Rooms are too crowded. Too many drunk people.

And they are entitled to their opinion. But then again, party means different things to different people. Some might call three or four people eating pizza at the union a party.

Basically there is a party for everyone. And those who say they don't like parties have usually wandered into a kind they didn't like and assumed they were all like that. The best thing to do in this situation is spread your partying around. Go to parties at different places and with different people. Or, throw one of your own. The world can always use another good party.

Panel issues charge of bias; specialist cries discrimination

A panel at the University of Minnesota has ruled that a former research specialist was the victim of sex discrimination when she was denied a promotion to an assistant professorship in biology.

The panel was formed under a court order resulting from another discrimination suit. The panel's purpose is to keep an eye on the university's affirmative-action program for women faculty members which was forced on the university by the same court order that appointed the panel.

The most recent ruling of the panel comes in the case of Florence K. Gleason who had applied for the assistant professorship in 1976 and 1977.

The court order forming the panel was issued as the result of a class-action suit brought by Shyamala Rajender, a former member in the chemistry department, against the university. Rajender won a $100,000 settlement.

'Visa' schools' administrators falsify foreign students' grades

Hundreds of foreign students attending Canadian universities were admitted on the basis of grades falsified by the administrators of private schools, according to the Toronto Globe and Mail.

The articles have led university officials in Ontario to call for stricter regulation of the private secondary schools that are attended mainly by students from foreign countries.

After a three-month investigation of three of Toronto's 17 "visa" schools, the newspaper reported that failing grades given to students were commonly raised to passing grades by administrators.

Because of tuition increases in Great Britain and the limited education offered in many foreign countries, the visa schools, which cater to foreign students, have opened their doors all over Canada in recent years.

But according to officials, students attending these visa schools usually do not do well their first year in the university. Problems often arise from a lack of English skills. Visa schools often advertise a speciality in English training.

In spite of the release of this information in the media, Canadian officials plan no immediate action against the visa schools. Since there are no requirements that teachers in visa schools hold professional degrees, discipline will be hard to exercise.

Activities will be grouped for HPER Fitness Center

The Board of Regents Friday approved establishment of a Fitness Center within the School of Health, Physical Education and Recreation (HPER).

According to Chancellor Del Weber, the new Fitness Center would combine a number of existing complementary activities into a single administrative unit within HPER.

Additionally the center will be a multi-faceted, offering education, research and service in various areas related to physical fitness, he added.

The Center's educational function would include communicating information in such areas as physical fitness, athletic conditioning, and weight loss, said Weber.

The research activities of the fitness center would extend to biomechanics, motor learning, physiology of exercise, and adapted physical education, he said.

Also, collaborative research efforts will continue with various units of the University of Nebraska Medical Center (UNMC), Weber explained.

The center's service function would involve a comprehensive fitness evaluation and subsequent exercise prescription, he said, adding that these activities will also provide a clinical experience for undergraduate and graduate physical education students specializing in exercise science.

Weber said the center will be formed through the reorganization of the existing staff at HPER. The center will be headed by a coordinator, who will report to the director of HPER.

The center will not require funding from the state, according to Weber. He said the operational costs will be covered by grants and direct charges for services.

Fund honors G. Burch

By Patty Connerley

A memorial fund is being established in memory of Ginger Burch, senior research associate at UNO's Center for Applied Urban Research, who died Labor Day weekend following an acute asthma attack.

The intentions of the fund, according to her husband Hobart Burch, a professor of social work at UNO, is to provide financial aid to women students who have dependent children and are pursuing a degree.

"I admit this may be arbitrary, but women students with children have a while set of extra responsibilities that tend to interfere with their studies," Burch said. He added that such women usually have money problems that make a college education nearly impossible.

Burch said although his wife didn't have to contend with financial difficulties, she still had many obstacles to overcome.

"You know, it's sad, but all Ginger's life it was an uphill struggle for her ... she was a victim of direct and indirect sex discrimination while both in school and on the job. Even here at UNO she was paid less than her male co-workers and had to fight for promotions."

Burch said it was for these reasons he decided to set up the fund "so other women going through the same thing could be helped."

Although the director of social work will administer the fund, financial assistance will be available to all women students with dependents. Participation in any degree program at UNO, UNL, or the University of Nebraska Medical Center (UNMC) is the only requirement, said Burch.

"The fund has been set up to be flexible enough to help one student with a light bill and another buy groceries. The grants will be small, but enough to keep a student from dropping out of college," he said.

According to Burch, the fund has collected $350 so far. Burch said he will contribute $300 each year.

"Hopefully, more contributions will come in. When the fund reaches about $2000, grants will be awarded," he said. However, Burch said he doesn't think any awards will be made until next year.

Donations to the Ginger Burch Memorial Fund can be sent to the University of Nebraska Foundation, Peter Kiewit Conference Center, 1313 Farnam St., he said.

Campus parking is 'sub'-equitable

In the Sept. 16 "Verne's Views" column, UNO's director of Campus Security stated that there is a "Sub-Compact Dilemma" this semester, and he issued a plea for "help" from those persons driving sub-compact cars.

McClurg said he has fielded many complaints regarding the fact that "small cars can park in big car spaces but big cars can't park in small car spaces."

We're glad.

The column goes on to say, in effect, that the phone calls are a nuisance and there's nothing McClurg can (or will) do about it anyway. To quote McClurg: "Enough said."

Not quite.

When a parking study revealed that 35 percent of all cars parked on campus were sub-compact, and when the University Planning Committee recommended that an effort be made to reserve more space for sub-compact cars, McClurg didn't tell them they were a nuisance and there was nothing he could do about it.

Hardly.

McClurg grabbed a paint can and began restriping parking areas and repainting parking lot signs.

The point is: if one wishes to be fair, and if 35 percent of all parking spaces can be designated as "sub-compact only," then 65 percent of the spaces should be marked "unsub-compact only."

If enough complaints are made, maybe (maybe) The University Planning Committee will realize the inequity of the situation it has created and will do something about it.

Tax cuts mean less butter, more guns

By Nicholas Von Hoffman

Oct. 1 is speeding at us. That's the day the much heralded budget cuts begin to happen, although with what effect is anybody's guess or everybody's. Administration people have been telling us they will result in lay-offs ranging from zero to a hundred thousand or more. Beyond that we have the consequences to state and local public employment.

What this means to us all, to the economy in the aggregate, has not been a matter for attention in Washington. The administration entertains a near religious belief that our society, that all human societies, contain a self-correcting, gyroscope-like mechanism which swings into effect as soon as "gobemint," as Mr. Reagan is wont to call it, is forced to remove its ham-handed self from the scene.

The lay-offs, according to this happy view of human events, will be short and painless because, accompanied by the tax cuts and various deregulatory activities, the private sector will increase productivity and that will make for more jobs. No article of faith in this breath-taking admixture of theology, morals and economics is more devotedly held than the assertion that productivity makes employment. Therefore tax law and government policy are being bent and changed to make money available to increase investment.

Unhappily, as the current direction in orders for machine tools and new equipment indicates, making the money available for investment in productivity is not the same thing as being assured that the owners of the money will invest it in the desired fashion.

In the last few months the big banks have made an estimated $100 billion bucks available for investment all right, but the investments were not to be in plant and equipment but for accomplishing mergers, of which the most famous has been the DuPont-Conoco marriage. Money seeks its highest return, which may, in some circumstances, appear to come from buying new equipment, but not in others. Why go to all the bother of buying machinery and operating a business for a return of, say, 11 percent if you can go to the bank and negotiate a certificate of deposit with the same money, a certificate that will pay you 19 percent?

This month's overriding, incontrovertible economic "fact" is that, thanks to the president's mania for war toys, we are going to be running much larger budget deficits than those that have been forecast by the White House. If that's the case, and the Federal Reserve Board sticks to its Milton Friedmanian determination not to print money to cover the gap between spending and income, the government's got to go borrow magnum, mega bucks at high, higher and highest interest rates.

This proposed plot for the economic soap opera has got the supply-side theorists, the original Kemp-Roth tax cut folks, in a dither. Here they are with a high likelihood they'll have gotten the lower tax rates without the burst in production, productivity and economic energy the cuts were supposed to trigger. The gross national product may continue to grump along at unsatisfactory levels, the promised two cornucopias in every pot nothing more than a dream left over from the golden '60s.

Such a prospect has got the supply-sider economists talking like worried liberals denouncing high interest rates. Actually high rates may serve a salubrious purpose, one that should be supported by every jingo who cheers on each occasion that Ronald Reagan and his collaborators tell us to look proud, because they are "re-arming America."

If you're going to cut taxes without the society's total production increasing significantly, then how are you going to get the material for the new weapons? There has to be a major diversion of resources into war factories. How is this to be done by an administration which hates centralized planning, detests rationing and government allocation?

The means they've lucked into is high interest rates. The rates which are injurious to sales in the housing and automobile industries free up money to refurbish old battleships and build new aircraft carriers. Sad to say, you can't get away from guns and butter.

You can pay for weapons by raising taxes, by creating unemployment, by inflation, by lowering wages, by stomping on certain industries, but come Oct. 1 and beyond, one way or another, more guns makes less butter.

UNO alumnus is upset with child care's delay

Letters to the editor are welcomed. However, the Gateway must know the name and address of writers. Noms de plume are accepted, but preference is given to those who permit their names to be published. All letters critical of individuals must be signed by using first and last names or initials and last name. The Gateway reserves the right to edit all letters for space and clarity. Letters should be sent to the Gateway office, Annex 17. Letters appearing in the Gateway do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the Gateway or its staff.

To the Editor:

I have just read the front page item of the Sept. 11, 1981, issue of the Gateway concerning Vice Chancellor Richard Hoover's decision to delay the opening of a child care program on the UNO campus. Hoover says he wants some "investigation and study" to determine if there is a need for such a program at UNO.

I graduated from UNO in Dec. 1974. There was a need for a child care program then. There has always been a need. If the university cannot decide whether there is a "need" for child care services at UNO within seven years, I seriously doubt that the administration truly understands what a "need" is.

According to your statistics, 554 students currently need a child care program. Florene Langford stated that a projected number of 415 students would use such a service. I agree with Langford — 415 students represents a substantial need.

I will go so far as to predict that if a child care program was established on or near the UNO campus, there would be more than 415 students in need. With a child care program available at minimal cost, conveniently located, many more parents would seriously consider enrolling at UNO full-time.

The Women's Resource Center and women's organizations have traditionally cited statistics proving the need for a child care program. Perhaps the administration would rather hear from a men's organization. If a number of male students were affected by the lack of child care facilities, perhaps the administration would take the issue seriously.

Sincerely yours,
Shelly Madden

Horoscope is OK

To the Editor:

I want to thank you for running your weekly horoscope column. After years of analysis, jogging, group sex, EST, S&M and Dale Carnegie, your horoscope has helped me to get my act together.

I have so desperately wanted to improve my interpersonal relationships. For the past ten years, my lifestyle has really been a drag. I was ripped off by charlatans who claimed they wanted to help me, when in reality, all they wanted to do was interface (in other words, paw my luscious body).

Astrology, however, is the answer. Both your column and "Astro" on the radio have improved my life. For example, I now know that my lover really loves me. Astrology has helped me understand that when my lover uses an electric cattle prod on me, it's for my own good — not an expression of cruelty. As Astro says: "Be agreeable. Such an attitude will lead to better relationships and big bucks."

My sign is Cancer. This means that I have tremendous creative abilities but also that I have a tendency to think for myself and be overly-aggressive. Such attributes can cause a conflict. As my mistress/lover says: "Life is shitty unless you let someone else control it for you." Astrology, then, should be mixed with a variety of self-help books for best results.

Taylor Hack, author of "Looking Out for Scorpions and Dressing Successfully," has made a profound insight. He argues that it is pointless to be altruistic. Therefore, everyone should be self-centered and super-competitive. However, we must recognize that there are only a few astrologists and social psychologists who really know anything, so we should ultimately bow to them. By the way, Taylor's new book is "Hitler Was A Capricorn: similarities Between Der Fuhrer and Mother Teresa."

Again, I want to thank you for running your horoscope. Although I'm dropping out of UNO to pursue a career in computerized, astrological sex techniques, I will continue to read the column.

Accident victim uses ad to search for friends

By Matt Smolsky

WANNA FRIEND? Straight 23-year-old auto accident victim who likes movies, concerts, food and backgammon seeks new friends. Slurred speech, limps, otherwise ok. You drive. Bill 397-2828.

Bill Vann used to have a 3.8 grade point average.

"I don't even remember how to get an A anymore," he said with halting speech.

Bill recently advertised in the Gateway for new friends. The ad is the result of a car accident he had in May of 1978.

Bill's mother, Judy Vann, said it was one of those accidents in which everything seems to go wrong.

He was travelling 45 mph on a "big wide highway" in San Diego, she said, when the rented 1975 Pinto he was driving veered, for some unexplained reason, to the soft shoulder.

Coma

The brakes failed and the car slammed into a road grader parked on the shoulder, she said, and as a result, Bill suffered severe head injuries and went into a coma until September of 1978.

The doctors in San Diego didn't expect Bill to live, said Mrs. Vann, but he came back to Omaha in July of 1978 and stayed at Immanuel Hospital for a year.

It was there that Bill began to re-learn everything most people take for granted — speaking, walking and even thinking, said Cathy Brown, one of his nurses.

Bill said he can't remember the accident or anything else from 1975 to 1978.

He said that when he came out of the coma, he "couldn't remember why Nixon wasn't president."

Long way

Bill first met Brown while he was still hospitalized. He said he has no recollection of the encounter.

"I took care of him for five months after he got out of Immanuel," said Brown.

"He's amazed me. He's really come a long way."

She said she quit taking care of him to have her baby, only to receive a phone call from him asking her to come back.

The ad, said Bill, came about because he "doesn't even know anybody now."

Talking difficult

Before the accident he had plenty of friends, he said, but they've all graduated from college and moved on.

Talking, especially to people he doesn't know, is difficult he said, so making new friends hasn't been the easiest task.

One person, Sophia Kono, an 18-year-old freshman, has responded to the ad so far.

Kono said she isn't sure why she did it. "I got to thinking that everyone can use a friend."

Bill sounded "spooky" when she first talked to him over the phone, she said, and that gave her second thoughts.

She said she changed her mind when she met Bill.

"He's a real sweet person. It (the accident) could happen to anybody anytime," she said.

Bill said he is somewhat glad for his amnesia, as he has no recollection of any pain.

"I don't believe what really happened to me," he said. "I don't believe I ever lived in San Diego."

Law school

The accident cut short his plans to become a lawyer, he said. He did, however, have two years of pre-law study completed at Mesa College in San Diego before the accident.

Bill came back to UNO in the fall of 1979 to take some classes as an audit student. Since then he has taken several full credit hours each semester while working toward a degree in real estate.

His mother said Bill's neurologist thinks it's an attainable goal.

The biggest difficulty he has, she said, is with memory lapses which make studying difficult.

Bill said he's taking courses this semester at UNO and Metropolitan Technical Community College in reading and business math.

There is one thing Bill said he can't remember, which probably came from his stay in San Diego — backgammon.

Bill said he loves to play it, but can't remember where he learned the game.

That doesn't seem to affect his playing abilities, and Brown confirmed Bill's prowess at the game — she said he always beats her.

Vice Chancellor enjoys going after ideas

By Leo Biga

Challenges and opportunities have always seemed to spark Otto Bauer, UNO's vice chancellor of academic affairs.

At the time of his decision to join the UNO staff, Bauer said he was professor of communication at the University of Wisconsin-Parkside.

While at Parkside, Bauer served as commissioner of the North Central Association, a regional college accreditation body. He was also a member of its visiting evaluation team.

While on a visit to UNO in the late 1970s for a review, Bauer said he was impressed with what he found.

When the academic affairs post became vacant, Bauer's familiarity with UNO led him to apply for the job.

"I thought it was a very good administrative opportunity," he said. "There were several strong aspects of the institution that appealed to me."

One notion he said he had before coming to UNO was that it was a more complex institution than others he had worked at.

"I felt I was arriving at a place that was relatively mature in its development," he said.

Number two

Bauer is closely involved with UNO's academic program planning, including the audit and review of existing programs, budgeting, personnel and public affairs.

"It's the number two position...reporting directly to the chancellor's office," he said.

Academic planning is one major effort Bauer said he's currently monitoring.

He said an Academic Planning Council, composed of UNO administrators and faculty, has been set up so that "every department will go through a review of its program quality, mission, student demand, and cost efficiency."

"I've also instituted a special task force called the Vice Chancellor's Task Force on University Requirements," he said. "Faculty will make recommendations on whether we should have requirements for admissions and graduation. They will bring their recommendations before all university constituencies."

"I've got a third agenda item, and that item deals with faculty relations. I want to try to establish fair and effective relationships with the Faculty Senate and the AAUP" (American Association of University Professors).

Bauer earned a full scholarship in debate to Northwestern University, only a few miles from his hometown of Elgin, Ill.

"I like the confrontation of ideas. I like to discuss... I like to take an idea and

Bauer

I like to go after it... to defend a position, be tough. I like to think I can do that. I also like to think I've got enough sense to compromise," he said.

Once at Northwestern, Bauer found he "enjoyed the scholarly life of teaching, research and service."

At Northwestern, where he met his wife, Bauer's intellectual combativeness, plus his continued debating, led him to major in speech/communications and English, he said.

Grad assistant

Thoughts of teaching didn't rate serious attention until graduate school, he said, where he was offered a graduate assistant post as coach of Northwestern's junior varsity debate team.

While coaching part-time, he was offered another assistant's job as a speech/communications teacher. It doubled his salary to nearly $1,000 per year.

"Very gratifying," is how Bauer described his feelings for teaching, something he's largely given up to concentrate on his administrative work.

"Some of the things about teaching that I really miss is the sense of completing a semester... turning in your grades and then starting a new semester. And because of the freedom that you have, you can say, 'I'm going to change things next semester.' You've got the freedom to change and try to do it better."

However, Bauer feels far from trapped in an administrative jungle.

"The appeal that I find in administration is in my academic background... in group communication, inter-personal communication, persuasion... the selling of ideas. You find people who say, 'you don't have the right idea' and they'll let you know what they think."

For now, Bauer says he's quite content where he's at.

By Mark Martens

The Maroon Chiefs of Morningside College, under the coaching of former UNO assistant Tim McGuire, shocked the UNO Mavericks 3-0 in the North Central Conference opener Saturday night at Al Caniglia Field.

A record crowd of 12,500 watched as Morningside won their first NCC football game since 1977 and raised their season record to 3-0, equaling last year's victory total. The Mavs dropped to 2-1 for the year.

The victory over UNO was the first in 10 years by a Morningside team, and only the second loss at home since Sandy Buda became head coach four seasons ago. The other loss came in 1978 to South Dakota, 20-3.

"This victory means an awful lot to me," McGuire said. "I never dreamed this could happen. Lately, I've been laying awake at night wondering how the game would go. I had visions of us getting blown out because I know how good these (UNO) guys are. I recruited them and I coached them."

Naran injured

The UNO offense, which hasn't scored a touchdown in two games, could not find a winning formula and lost four of ten fumbles, one which led to Mark Paulsen's game-winning 29-yard field goal in the second period.

Buda said that injuries to both quarterbacks, Mark McManigal and Randy Naran, hampered the Maverick offense.

Naran, who started the game, suffered a torn tendon in his left thumb. McManigal was having trouble with back spasms.

"We were having problems with our quarterbacks," Buda said. "Naran injured his thumb and couldn't pitch the ball. McManigal couldn't throw the ball and Turner Gill (quarterback for UNL) wasn't available. But there are no excuses, we were simply outplayed."

Didn't execute

Offensive Coordinator Chuck Osberg agreed with Buda's analogy of the game.

"It's the kind of a game everyone expects to win. We didn't do a good job in executing anything and Morningside did an outstanding job of preparing their kids. They simply out-coached us," he said.

The Mavericks, however, did have an opportunity to win the game in the fourth quarter.

With 3:30 left in the game UNO moved from its own 28 to the Morningside 33, with the help of a pass interference call.

Pass overthrown

Naran then hit Russell Green on a 13-yard pass to the 20, but two straight fumbles and an incomplete pass left the Mavs with a fourth down and 19 with less than 30 seconds left.

The Mavs went for the win, but Naran overthrew Green in the end zone.

Buda said he elected not to kick a field goal because of the Mavs' erratic kicking game.

"We haven't been kicking the ball well and it was a little out of Mark Pettit's range," he said. "Besides, we wanted to go for the win. We wouldn't have been happy with a tie."

Field goal fails

UNO had a chance to tie the game earlier after Steve Agee intercepted a Rhett Kenney pass at the Morningside 33 and returned it to the 25. A personal foul against Morningside moved the ball down to the 12-yard line, but again a costly fumble stifled the offense.

Naran was thrown for a 15-yard loss after the ball was knocked out of his hands on an attempted pitch.

The Mavs had to settle for a 45-yard field goal attempt, but Jeff Pate's try was short of the mark.

Morningside's lone scoring drive began with 8:39 left in the first half, when defensive lineman Jay Stidham made his first of the three fumble recoveries after teammate Tom Warren stripped the ball from Mav fullback Dave Soto at the UNO 43.

Wishbone to stay

Morningside then moved the ball to the 30 on the ground, and fullback Terry Pomerence caught a 13-yard pass to put Morningside in field goal range at the 17-yard line.

UNO's defense, which has not given up a touchdown in nine quarters, then stiffened and forced the Maroon Chiefs to kick the field goal.

Buda said he will continue to use the wishbone offense, despite poor offensive showings by the Mavs in the first three games.

"We just have to go back and pick up the pieces, dust ourselves off, and come back strong next week against South Dakota State," he said.

The Mavs could muster only 142 yards rushing in 51 attempts.

Missed opportunities

Osberg said he will try to prepare the offense psychologically for Saturday's contest against South Dakota State at Brookings, S.D.

"We missed a lot of opportunities, but there's nothing you can do except try to prepare the team better for the next game," he said. "Our defense has kept us in every game so far this season, now all we have to do is get the offense rolling."

UNO kickers rout Coyotes in home opener

By Tim McNeil

The UNO Soccer Club lifted their record to 4-2 by shutting out South Dakota 7-0 Thursday night at Al Caniglia Field.

Maverick goalies Jim Houston and Pablo McIntosh combined to blank the Coyote offense. The UNO defense allowed only four shots on goal, compared to the Mavs' 33.

Despite the victory, UNO Coach Peter Kassay-Farkas was not pleased with his team's performance.

"I was expecting a lot more from our team tonight. We did not show enough accurate passing, and our defense was not tested," he said. "I wanted our defense to be tested and I hoped to play everybody because of our tough schedule ahead."

Kassay-Farkas used seven different players to put the Mavs on the board. Freshman Brent Muir scored the first goal 11 minutes into the first half. It took UNO nine minutes to add another score as Livio Nespoli drilled one past the Coyote goalkeeper.

The Mavs' offense continued to dominate as they exploded at the end of the half, scoring four goals in 15 minutes. UNO's remaining four goals of the half were scored by junior Dave Young, sophomore Andy Steele, sophomore Kevin O'Connor, and freshman Scott brokke, giving UNO a 6-0 lead.

The pace slowed in the second half as UNO played ball-control offense. Kassay-Farkas mixed first and second string units in the second half.

The Mavs' lone goal in the second half was scored by Jeff Payton with 5:45 remaining in the game.

Kassay-Farkas said he feels the Mavs' key to success this year will be the play of the front line, which must perform well if UNO hopes to compete with the likes of Park College, Dordt, and Creighton.

UNO's next home game, Sept. 29, may be the test the team is looking for as the Mavs take on nationally-ranked Park College at 7:30 p.m.

Hall wins Doane run; Mavs 3rd

UNO runner Jim Hall raced to a first-place finish Saturday at the Doane Invitational Cross Country Meet in Crete, Neb.

Hall's first-place finish, however, was not enough to boost the Mavs into first. UNO finished third behind Kearney St. and Midland.

The Mav senior covered the four-mile course in a time of 21 minutes to beat second-place finisher Dave Pimpara of Midland. Pimpara finished with a time of 21:20. Craig Einspahr of Concordia was third with 21:34.

Kearney, which placed four runners in the top 10, won the team title with 36 points. Midland was second with 55 followed by UNO 86, Nebraska Wesleyan 95, Doane 128, Concordia 129, and Hastings 217.

The Mav runners travel to Manhattan, Kan., Saturday for the Kansas St. Invitational.

Spikers win SDS tourney

The Lady Mav volleyball team captured its first tournament championship Saturday at the South Dakota State Invitational at Brookings, S.D.

The Lady Mavs breezed through the tournament undefeated, beating South Dakota St. 15-9, 15-11 to claim the championship.

Wendy Melcher, a sophomore from Beatrice, Neb., recorded 26 kill assists and nine service aces in leading UNO to the title.

"We played good ball and anticipated our plays very well," said Kruger. "We also played especially good on defense."

Friday the Lady Mavs defeated three foes to earn their way into the finals.

UNO dropped Minnesota-Morris 15-7, 15-6; Valley City State College 15-4, 15-4, and Black Hills State College 15-5, 15-5.

Melcher again was the leader for the Lady Mavs with 19 kill assists. Freshman Trish Higgins continued the sparkling play which earned her "Lady Mav of the Week" honors with 13 kill spikes, while Karen Povondra, a senior, added 27 defensive saves to the UNO effort.

The Lady Mavs' next tournament will be in Cedar Falls, Iowa, Saturday at the Northern Iowa Invitational.

UNO cheerleaders working hard for 'spirit'

By Mike McClellan

A few years ago Mary Lou Gouttierre was at a UNO basketball game and noticed the cheerleading squad seemed disorganized. She mentioned this to Athletic Director Don Leahy and, as a result, is in her third year of sponsoring the squad.

Gouttierre, wife of UNO Professor Thomas Gouttierre, said this year's squad has been working hard since May and "they're excited about the football season."

The squad attended the NCAA cheerleaders camp in Ames, Ia., for the second time this past summer, and also held cheerleading clinics for area high schools.

Featured on the squad are six male "yell leaders". This is the second year yell leaders have been on the squad, Gouttierre said. Last year only three men volunteered for duty, she added.

Returning yell leader Bob Denholm said he joined the squad to get more involved in the college life.

"Being on a commuter campus, people at UNO have a tendency to not get in-involved. They just come for classes, Denholm said, adding "the result is apathy and a lack of school spirit."

The cheerleaders, Denholm said, see their job as spirit. He said off the field they put up posters encouraging school spirit, and hope to hold a pep rally later in the season.

During the summer the cheerleaders practiced three times a week, but as the first game drew near, the squad started working out six times a week.

On Monday, Wednesday, and Friday the squad members meet in the gymnastics room of the HPER building at 6:30 a.m., because "that's a time we all have free." On Tuesday and Thursday they meet on Caniglia Field at 8 p.m., and on Saturday they practice at 8 a.m. added Denholm.

Practices generally last an hour and a half and consist of warming up, practicing cheers, and working on style and technique involved in the lifts and formations.

In addition, the squad members work out and run on their own. Being in shape is a must, Gouttierre said, because all squad members have to keep moving the entire game. They are also on diets "to keep them lean and mean" she added.

Warm weather uniforms for the girls are white and black this year. Red is being de-emphasized to keep the squad distinguishable from the other red team in the state, she said.

The cheerleaders will perform at every UNO game this year except for the North Dakota State contest in Fargo.

Returning squad members are captain

New cheerleaders are Jennifer Armstrong, Sam Rush, Anita Wells, Becky

Flora, Delores Kerfoot, Mike Debolt, Tim Placek, Rich Rinde, and Tom Satorie.

Another yell leader, Marc Johnson, is out for the year with a broken wrist.

Lady Mav runners to hold meeting

The Lady Mav track field team will hold a meeting Sept. 29 for all women interested in joining the team for the 1980-81 season.

The gathering will be held at 3 p.m. in HPER room 102. All current track athletes, as well as anyone interested in competing for the Lady Mavs should attend. For more information call Coach Bob Condon at 554-3265.

Verne's Views

By Verne McClurg
Director of UNO Campus Security

Another Way

In my opinion, there are many ways to travel back and forth from home or work to UNO. I've discussed many of them in depth over the past years: MAT bussing, Aksarben Shuttlebussing, driving, carpooling, ridesharing, walking, bicycling, having someone drop you off or pick you up, and even a taxi on occasion.

It is my firm belief that all of these methods of transportation are used intermittently. Schedules, work hours, and daily tasks vary enough that one could virtually keep from driving, alone, in a car to UNO.

There is "another way", however, which I have found to be satisfying, inexpensive, and on chilly mornings very exhilarating! I'm talking about riding a motorcycle. Yes, I purchased a small street bike last April and have since put on over 1,000 miles hither and yon — all in Omaha.

During the past four weeks I have driven my car (yes, I have a Parking Permit) 4 times, shared a ride 3 times, and ridden the bike the rest of the time. And, I've met some fine people along the way: Faculty, Staff, and Students.

No, I'm not suggesting all of you ride motorcycles. "Another way" may not be your way. All I ask is that you consider it as a viable alternative. If you don't, that's okay. Just keep an extra eye out for us when you travel the streets and highways, please.
